Committee OKs Reserve "Force Out" Pay; Retroactive Feature Adds 5,081 Officers

The Reserve "force out" pay bill was sent to the House floor this week in a move which may mean enactment of the measure before adjournment.

Reported by the House Armed Services Committee in amended form on 26 July, the measure provides lump-sum rehabilitation pay for 5,081 Reserve officers involuntarily released since 1 July 1954, and approximately 2,500 others who are scheduled to be involuntarily released this fiscal year.

It would cost approximately $188 million through fiscal '56.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has informed the Reserve Officers Association it will hold hearings on the bill and see that it gets to the Senate floor.

In amending the measure, the House Committee also changed the basis of determining the amount to be paid officers involuntarily released. Under the new terms, such officers would receive one-half of one month's basic pay in the grade in which they are serving at time of release for each year of active warrant or commissioned service up to and including the 17th year.

Thus, a lieutenant colonel with 22 years' service would receive $5,436.60.

The Committee also removed a provision which required officers receiving the pay to refund the total amount, through monthly increments, if they later become eligible for and receive retired pay. A similar provision affecting those who might later receive disability compensation also was dropped.

In making the measure retroactive to 1 July 1954, the Committee increased the total cost by more than $12.6 million. Affected by the retroactive feature are 3,916 Army officers, 654 Navy officers and 511 Marine Corps officers.

Tax Credit Bill Nears Enactment

Retired military personnel under 65 will pay $6 million less in income taxes under the terms of a bill passed by the House and approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The measure (HR 291) gives retired military personnel under 65 an income tax credit worth as much as $240 annually. It is made retroactive to 31 Dec. 1954.

Last year when the Congress passed the new Internal Revenue Code, a provision was written into the bill which gives persons under 65 who retire under a public retirement system a tax credit equal to 20 per cent of retirement incomes up to $1,200. However, a special Senate proviso excluded retirement systems operated for the benefit of military personnel.

Restore AF Acad. Funds, Other Projects Win O.K.

The Senate has restored $79.5 million in supplemental Defense funds to provide for continued construction of the new Air Force Academy.

At the same time, more than $2 billion was returned for other Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force projects. Most of the latter amount (including $250 million for family housing) had been eliminated on points of order during the House floor debate.

To carry out the military construction program for fiscal '56 the Senate voted $2,017,471,300, compared with $2.3 billion asked by the Administration. The measure now goes to Conference to iron out House-Senate differences.

In addition to the Air Force Academy funds, principal items restored by the Senate were for:

Navy
Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, $2,200,000
Naval Ordnance Plant, Macon, Ga., $3,800,000

Army
Command & General Staff College, $3,382,000
Black Hills Ordnance Depot (family housing), $1,350,000
Fort Huachuca, Ariz., $5,913,000

Air Force
Buckingham Weapons Employment Center, $11,577,000
Duluth AFB, $2,541,000
Grand Forks Site AFB, $5,822,000
Traverse City AFB, $1,881,000
Hunter AFB, $4,223,000
Lake Charles AFB, $2,396,000
Travis AFB, $9,897,000
England AFB, $2,684,000
Classified Overseas Bases, $23,169,000

The Senate also approved overall reductions of $48.7 million for the Army, $80,800,000 for the Navy-Marine Corps, and $106,214,000 for the Air Force.

Appropriations for Ent AFB and for the transfer of the Air Research and Development Center to Wright-Patterson AFB were not restored.

AF Says 4844 Lts. Will Win Tracks

The Air Force will make 4,844 promotions to temporary captains between Oct. 1955 and Apr. 1956, with about 14,000 first lieutenants eligible for consideration.

Other quotas in the '56 temporary promotion program will be furnished major commands on the following schedule: for majors, 31 July; for lieutenant colonels, 31 Aug.; for colonels, 30 Sept.

Eligibility criteria for temporary promotion consideration is established as follows: for captain, at least two years in grade of first lieutenant by 31 Dec. '55; for major, three and a half years in grade of captain by 31 Dec. '55; for lieutenant colonel, three and a half years in grade of major by 31 Dec. '55; for colonel, three years in grade of lieutenant colonel by 31 Dec. '55.

The AF Form 527 of eligible personnel is the sole record used by selection boards in the program.

Navy Picks Largest Number Of RADms Since WWII; Dips 903 Names For Jr. Man

A Navy flag board has dipped far into the junior captains' ranks to pick 39 new admirals—largest number to be selected since the end of WWII.

The new emphasis on youth in the Navy's high command was pointed up by the board's action in going 903 names below the promotion zone to select 14 officers commissioned in 1923, '29, '30, '31.

The junior unrestricted line officer named by the board is Medal of Honor winner Capt. Lawson Paterson Ramage, USN, now assigned to the Atlantic Fleet Submarine Force. Captain Ramage, who is 46, was picked from a position 504 names below the zone anchor man.

The junior officer selected by the board (903 names below the zone) is Capt. William R. Sheeley, USN, a Special Duty law officer assigned to the Office of the Judge Advocate General. He is the first law officer in the history of the Navy to be selected for flag rank.

In another "first," the board picked a majority (25) of the officers from within the promotion zone. More than 200 were passed over and no officers were selected from among those above the zone who previously had been passed over. According to last year's zone, 137 captains were passed over for the second time.

The new admirals range in age from 45 to 51. Most (21) are in their 40's. Here's the age breakdown: 45, two; 46, one; 47, two; 48, three; 49, 13; 50, 12; and 51, six.

This year's board picked 18 Naval Aviators, almost twice the number selected by boards for the last five years. Four of the officers chosen for two-stars are qualified to command submarines.

The board named the smallest number of EDO's (three) to be picked in three years. The three AEDO's selected for flag rank, however, make up the largest number (three times the number chosen in (Please turn to Page 1427))

College Board Tests Used For West Point

The U. S. Military Academy has adopted civilian examination board tests for determining mental qualifications of candidates.

Effective with the class entering West Point in July 1956 the new testing procedures replace a series of special examinations that had been designed specifically for the Academy. The criteria and number of credits required for entrance to the school have not been changed.

Army officials point out that use of the new tests will result in a savings of approximately $25,000 to the government each year.

The College Entrance Examination Board, which will conduct the tests for the Army, is recognized as a national agency for testing prospective students and is used by more than 150 colleges and universities. Upon the student's request, results of the test will be forwarded to two schools in addition to West Point.

Areas covered in the College Entrance Examination Board test are scholastic aptitudes, intermediate mathematics, English composition and social studies.

SAC Scholars

Educational reports from the Strategic Air Command show there were 2,299 officers and 16,606 airmen enrolled in USAFI courses during the last part of FY '55.

During this same period 206 men received their elementary school diplomas, 600 were awarded high school diplomas, 12 earned college degrees from off-duty study, and 17 received degrees for Bootstrap final semester work.

"SAC's educational program is among the best in the Air Force," Lt. Col. Dominic George, command educational director, said. "A recent educational survey conducted by SAC Headquarters indicates that 98.2 of our officers have high school diplomas or better, and 58.8 per cent of the airmen have graduated from high school or received equivalency credits."

Brig. Gen. E. L. "Ep" Sykes, USAF, Assistant Chief of Staff (J-3), Plans and Operations, since January 1953, leaves the Alaskan Command this month for duty as Deputy Director of the Budget, Headquarters USAF. His successor has not yet been named.

Oldest of the unified or joint commands, the Alaskan Command is headed by Lt. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, USAF, and is located at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska.

Survivor Bill Seen In Peril For '55

Chances appeared dim as THE JOURNAL went to press for passage of the Survivor Benefits Bill during the present session of Congress.

The House-approved measure, which would place all military personnel under Social Security and provide liberalized benefits for scores of thousands of widows and survivors, was stuck in the Senate Finance Committee.

At late week, that group had failed to hold a hearing on the measure, which President Eisenhower has said is "must" legislation.

Unless Congress remains in session longer than originally anticipated, it appears likely that the bill will go over until the second session of the 84th Congress.

The Survivor Benefits Bill cleared the House with little difficulty following its preparation and presentation by the Hardy Select Committee. Their work was coordinated with the Armed Services Committee and the other interested groups on Capitol Hill to assure quick passage.

Approve EM Subsistence

The new subsistence bill for enlisted military personnel has been approved and sent to the White House.

The measure authorizes enlisted men who live at home and are entitled to a commuted ration of $1.10 per day (or an average of 36 cents per meal) to receive an additional allowance of approximately 50 cents for each meal they must eat in commercial facilities.

Principally affected by the bill are 1,236 enlisted men and women assigned to the Pentagon who are authorized to live off post and draw commuted rations.

Col. Reing Takes Command At Japan Procurement Unit

Col. C. M. Reing, USA, has assumed command of Japan Procurement Agency, Yokohama, replacing Col. Charles K. Allen, USA, who is returning to the United States for reassignment to Ordnance Ammunition Command, Joliet, Ill.

Colonel Reing has been Chief of the Quartermaster Industrial Mobilization Planning Office, located at the Chicago Quartermaster Depot, and has been assigned to major procurement activities in Chicago, Ill., Washington, D. C., New York, N. Y., and Philadelphia, Pa.

Prior to his assignment to JPA, he was the Quartermaster Inspector General for the Northeast area of the United States.

Mrs. Frances L. Reing, Colonel Reing's wife and their three children, Patricia 11, Michael 8, and John 6, are residing at Springfield, Pa.

Col. Hall To Bliss

Col. Augustus A. Hall, MC, USA, Post Surgeon and commanding officer of the U. S. Army Hospital at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., has been reassigned as Post Surgeon at Ft. Bliss, Tex., effective 10 Aug.

NURSE-WMS BILLS GO TO WHITE HOUSE

Army and Air Force nurses and women medical specialists would benefit from two bills which have been approved by the Congress and sent to the White House.

The first measure (HR 2150) affects about 64 nurses and three women medical specialists who were integrated into the Regular components between 16 April 1947 and 31 Dec. 1947 as captains after 10 years' service. The bill authorizes an adjusted date of rank for these officers, based on the present 7-year promotion-list requirement for promotion to the permanent grade of captain.

The second bill (HR 4106) has two purposes. It gives nurses and women medical specialists credit up to five years for the active commissioned service they performed after the age of 21 in either the Army or AF after 1947 and prior to appointment as Regular officers. It also authorizes a three-year promotion list credit for any nurse or woman medical specialist, who, because of prior civilian experience, was initially appointed in the Regular component in the grade of first lieutenant. Such credit would be given only to officers who had not performed as much as three years' active commissioned service after 1947 and prior to Regular appointment.

In the latter measure, the two types of credit are separate and not cumulative. The officer is given whichever type of credit is greater, either that for active commissioned service actually performed—up to a maximum of five years—or the three-year credit if her professional experience justified the first lieutenant grade upon appointment and her active commissioned service subsequent to 1947 had not equaled three years.

Change Navy Integration, Two-Year Limit Set

The Congress has amended the Navy's request for a permanent augmentation bill to make it effective for only two years.

The measure (HR 2109) provides authority for the Navy and Marine Corps to integrate selected Reserve officers of the lowest three grades into the Regular Navy and Marine Corps.

The Senate Armed Services Committee noted that the Defense Department is considering the submission of a package integration program for all the Services and, consequently, it seems "advisable to place a time limitation" on the Navy-Marine Corps proposal.

The bill went to the White House late this week.

KINGS POINT PERMANENT

The Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee has approved a House-passed bill to provide for the maintenance of the Merchant Marine Academy (Kings Point) on a permanent basis.

The Committee said: "American flag ships must have well-trained and capable officers if they are to survive against the increasing threat of foreign competition."

Chaplain Evans To AWC

Chaplain (Col.) Luther W. Evans, USA, Commandant of The Chaplain School, Ft. Slocum, N. Y., has been assigned for studies at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Prior to his assignment to The Chaplain School, Colonel Evans served as Eighth Army Chaplain in Korea from 1952 to 1953. He and Mrs. Evans were honored 22 July at a reception in the Officers Open Mess by the Staff and Faculty of The Chaplain School.

Col. Hayes Joins WADF

Col. Thomas L. Hayes, USAF, returning from a European assignment at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, has succeeded Col. George L. LaBrecche, USAF, as Western Air Defense Force Assistant Deputy for Operations.

Colonel LaBrecche has departed Hamilton AFB, Calif., to attend school at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C.

Alaskan Comd. Tells Senior Officer Changes Affecting Army, Navy And Air Force

The first two weeks in July have seen three major changes in key positions for senior Army, Navy, and Air Force officers assigned to the Alaskan Command.

Col. Tom R. Stoughton, USMA '30, has been designated as Chief of Staff, Alaskan Command, replacing Brig. Gen. George E. Bush, USMA '29, recently named as Chief of the Management Division, Office of the Army Comptroller, Washington, D. C.

Capt. Albert C. Burrows, USN, has reported as Deputy Chief of Staff. Captain Burrows came directly to Alaska from the Far East and an assignment as Commander Destroyer Squadron 9, Pacific Fleet. He is a 1928 graduate of the Naval Academy.

Brig. Gen. E. L. "Ep" Sykes, USAF, Assistant Chief of Staff (J-3), Plans and Operations, since January 1953, leaves the Alaskan Command this month for duty as Deputy Director of the Budget, Headquarters USAF. His successor has not yet been named.

Oldest of the unified or joint commands, the Alaskan Command is headed by Lt. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, USAF, and is located at Elmendorf AFB, Alaska.

Congress Authorizes Early Discharge For 300,000 Men In New Reserve Bill

Early discharges have been authorized by Congress for 300,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines and coast guardsmen.

The new authority is contained in the modified National Reserve Plan, which was approved and sent to the White House for Presidential signature this week. It will be up to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson to determine whether or not the authority will be used.

Enlistees and draftees who have as little as 12 months' service can be released under the terms of the bill, provided they agree to join the Ready Reserve and participate in Reserve training for a maximum of three years.

The discharge plan was drafted by Senate-House conferees to take the place of a bonus proposal advanced by Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

As approved by both Houses, the new NRP proviso authorizes the Secretaries of the military services, with the approval of Defense Secretary Wilson, to draw up new early-discharge regulations, effective until 1 July 1957.

Under these regulations, men who already have been inducted or enlisted and who complete a minimum of 12 months in the Armed Forces, would be released from active duty and transferred to units of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force or Coast Guard Reserve, if they agree to participate in training in the Ready Reserve for a period which, when added to the amount of time they spent on active duty, totals four years.

The maximum number who can be released under the plan is 150,000 during the current fiscal year and 150,000 during fiscal '57, ending 30 June 1957.

House and Senate conferees added the new section to bolster the Reserve training program by inducing men to voluntarily participate.

At the same time, they added a second new section which gives the Pentagon authority to set up a one-year Reserve training program.

Under this section, the Service Secretaries, with Mr. Wilson's approval, may accept enlistments in the Ready Reserve for a period of one year from men who are released from active duty after the date of enactment of the new Reserve plan. Men who enlist in the Ready Reserve under this program will be required to train for one-year but, thereafter, at their own request, will be relieved of further obligation to serve in the Ready Reserve.

No more than 200,000 men may be accepted annually, through 30 June 1957, under this section.

As it went to the White House, the Reserve bill provides a Ready Reserve ceiling of 2,900,000 men. It also establishes a six-month training program for 18½-year-olds, and provides compulsory features for Reserve training.

In addition to the provisions already discussed, here are the main features of the plan:

Men who enter the Armed Forces after enactment of the legislation will be required to serve on active duty for the period for which they are obligated, and in the Ready Reserve for a period of time which, when added to their period of active duty, totals five years.

Thus, an inductee who serves two years on active duty will be required to participate in training in the Ready Reserve for a period of three years. During the three-year period, he will be required to participate in 48 drill periods and not to exceed 17 days' active duty for training annually. If he cannot participate in this type of training, or equivalent training, he can apply for 30 days of active duty each year, and thus fulfill his training obligation.

If he refuses or fails to satisfactorily participate, he can be involuntarily ordered to active duty for 45 days to satisfy his Ready Reserve obligation for the year in which he fails to satisfactorily participate.

Provisions of the bill reduce the total military obligation to six years for those who enter the Armed Forces after enactment of the NRP. However, those now serving on active duty, or who previously served on active duty, will continue to have a total 8-year military obligation. The latter group, under the terms of the bill, have no obligation to train in the Reserve program.

Voluntary enlistment in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard Reserve is provided for persons under 18½ years of age.

Such persons will be deferred from the draft so long as they serve satisfactorily as members of organized Reserve units, or until they reach their 28th birthday.

Such enlistees who perform a period of active duty for training of not less than three months nor more than six months (under Pentagon regulations) and thereafter continue to satisfactorily participate in the Ready Reserve, are not liable for induction after they have completed eight years of combined active duty for training and Ready Reserve training.

Ready Reserve training for this group is mandatory. Not more than 250,000 persons may be accepted annually under the six-month trainee program, which terminates on 1 Aug. 1959.

Those who enlist in the six months' program before reaching 18½ while attending high school shall be deferred from the six months' training until they leave high school or reach the age of 20.

Thus, up to 250,000 men may be accepted annually for training in the Armed Forces provided they agree to perform active-duty training for not less than three nor more than six months, as determined by the Defense Department, and thereafter, until they have completed a total of eight years of combined active and Reserve service, they are obligated to perform Ready Reserve training consisting of 48 drill periods and not more than 17 days of active-duty training each year, or instead, 30 days of active duty training each year.

If a six-month trainee, or an individual who enlists in the Reserve prior to 18½ and agrees to remain liable for induction up to age 28, fails to participate satisfactorily, he may be ordered to active duty for 45 days or he may be drafted.

COMMITTEE OKs JCS RESIDENCE

Construction of a $125,000 residence for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has been approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The Committee eliminated an additional $175,000 proposed by the Defense Department to construct a communications facility and housing for four of the Chairman's aides.

"The quarters now occupied by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," the Committee said, "are considerably smaller in size than the quarters occupied by any of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. As the senior military officer of the United States on active duty, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff must act as host at many official functions."

"The present quarters now available to the Chairman are not adequate for such purposes and it has been necessary for him to utilize private clubs for official entertainment. This has not proved satisfactory and is not consistent with the prestige that the senior military officer of the United States should enjoy."

Each of the three military departments will bear an equal share of the cost of the Chairman's new residence which will be constructed on the grounds of the Naval Observatory in Washington.

20th Infantry Reg., "Sykes' Regulars," Perks Up Esprit with Pride of History

(A research and history project which has accomplished much to boost the morale and pride of the 20th Infantry Regiment commanded by Col. Franklin R. Sibert, USA, at Ft. Ord, Calif., is the subject of the following article. The article was prepared for THE JOURNAL by 1st Lt. Wesley G. Jones, Adjutant of the 20th.)

THE Twentieth United States Infantry was in a dormant state not uncommon to many of its brother units in our Army today. The Regiment carried its numerical designation, and its table of organization was nearly filled; yet, somewhere, it had lost its real identity and the pride that goes hand in hand with it.

The Regiments in the Army are wallowing in an ever-changing, unstabilized period. The Soldier finds very little close to home to dedicate his allegiance to, as both the Soldier and the Regiment are here today and gone tomorrow. Many of our units are activated in an emergency and deactivated almost as soon as the danger is past. A man will serve a brief tour with one organization and move on to the next without ever knowing a thing about the past and glory of his unit. The absence of Esprit De Corps is a serious lack in such men.

That was the problem facing us in the Twentieth United States Infantry early in 1955. With the recognition that Esprit was the soul and lifeblood of an organization, we began to search for the best method to build up that Esprit.

The spirit of a regiment lies in its past and traditions. In a training regiment such as ours, the past frequently lies hidden and dust-covered; for few of its members are with the regiment long enough to dig into its past, or wear its crest on their uniform long enough to wonder or care about that past. No longer does the recruit stay long enough in the outfit to wear the proud stripes of the Sergeant Major, nor does the young second lieutenant serve long enough to occupy the chair of the Regimental Commander.

Therefore, searching into our past seemed to present a long and difficult assignment. As the initial step, letters were sent out to all possible sources of information: Military periodicals, service organizations, the Chief of Military History and the Chief Signal Officer in Washington, and the Library of Congress. Outside, friends carried on the search with visits to libraries, examinations of old records and interviews with past commanders.

At first it seemed that we had drawn a blank as the negative answers began to come in. Soon, however, we were given references to long-forgotten documents and pamphlets. Letters came in from old members of the Regiment, and we began the compilation of a vast store of historical information, which covered the long span of time from the Civil War to the present day. A cadet at West Point discovered us mentioned quite favorably under our official name of "Sykes' Regulars" in Stephen Vincent Benet's John Brown's Body—"Sykes and the regulars covered the retreat," which refers to the few who saved the Union Forces from destruction during their disorganized retreat from Manassas in 1861.

One of our most valuable sources was the daughter of Maj. Gen. William Spencer McCaskey, who commanded the Regiment for four years while it was occupied with the Philippine Insurrection. From this source we procured many priceless documents, pictures, and eyewitness accounts of that period, as well as activities during the Spanish-American War and the well known San Francisco earthquake.

As we accumulated a large store of trophies and pictures from the past, a Regimental Museum was dedicated to Lieutenant Rudolph and Corporal Mayfield, two Congressional Medal of Honor winners of "Sykes' Regulars" during the New Guinea and Luzon Campaigns of World War II. This museum is now available to all members of the present 20th U. S. Infantry, so that they might learn of their heritage from the past. The regimental chapel was commemorated to Lt. John J. Crittenden who lost his life at the Little Big Horn while on detached service with General Custer. That occurrence, incidentally, added the Little Big Horn Battle Streamer to our Regimental Colors—the only Infantry Regiment with that battle honor.

To write our history in a finished form we obtained the services of that eminent author, Col. James Warner Bellah, who visited the Regiment to examine our records. He has presently completed a historical sketch which will be placed in the hands of all newly assigned personnel on their first day, so that they might share the proud past of their new outfit. A complete history in book form is forthcoming from Colonel Bellah.

That is the way that we licked the Esprit problem. Today the men of the Twentieth United States Infantry (Sykes' Regulars) know and honor the history and traditions of their Regiment. They are proud to be one of "Sykes' Regulars."

"Those are Regulars, by God!"

Following is the text of Colonel Sibert's letter to members of his command:

DISCIPLINE AND ESPRIT DE CORPS

In achieving the high standards necessary for success in combat, Sykes' Regulars will place maximum emphasis on discipline and efficiency. Throughout history the most highly trained and disciplined troops have proved their superiority in battle. This was recently exemplified in both World War II and in Korea. It will continue to be exemplified in future wars.

Unit efficiency can only be achieved when the individual soldier is basically trained to the highest degree. Unit morale can only be high if the esprit of the soldier is of the highest. Individual self-respect and pride of organization are indispensable factors in the building and maintaining of morale.

The visible manifestation of the esprit and combat fitness of a command is found in the enthusiastic and efficient performance of duty, smartness, neatness and punctilious

WHO GETS FIFTH ARMY?

President Eisenhower is expected to announce shortly a successor for retiring Lt. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, USA, as Commanding General of the Fifth Army at Chicago, Ill. General Gay has been nominated for three-star rank on the retired list. He will become head of the New Mexico Military Institute.

Seen as a prospect for the post is Lt. Gen. William H. Arnold, USA, who was a budget expert at the Pentagon prior to assignment to Turkey in July 1950. In February 1953, he was made Commanding General of U. S. Forces Austria.

General Arnold thus has five years overseas service. This fact plus the shift of troops from Austria indicates that he is in line for new duties.

Other possible appointees for the Fifth Army job include Lt. Gen. Bruce Clarke, USA, Commanding General of U. S. Army Pacific, and Lt. Gen. John H. Collier, I Corps Commander in Korea.

Col. Lancer To PMGC

Col. Thomas F. Lancer, USA, provost marshal of the Seventh Army, will assume command of The Provost Marshal General Center, Camp Gordon, Ga., in late August.

Colonel Lancer will replace Col. John K. Daly, USA, who has been assigned to USAREUR where he will take over the post currently held by Colonel Lancer. Temporary commander of the Center is Col. George P. Hill, Jr., USA, former deputy commander, who leaves in August to attend the Armed Forces Industrial College in Washington, D. C.

Col. Harrell to Pentagon

Col. Ben Harrell, USA, Chief of Staff to the U. S. Commander, Berlin, for the last year, has departed for Washington, D. C., where he will assume a new assignment at the Pentagon.

Sykes' Regulars Build Esprit

conformity to the service requirements of military courtesy.

The appearance of the individual soldier has much to do with his pride and self-respect. He should be assisted in every way by his leaders to meet the high standards of the Regiment. Discipline in dress and personal appearance is mandatory. Clothing will be clean, neat and buttoned; belts will be clean and buckles shined; garrison caps will be worn smartly on the left side of the head; unauthorized articles will not be worn and shoes and boots will be highly polished at all times. The soldier's hair will be neat and closely trimmed at all times. Complete uniformity of clothing and equipment will be required in all formations.

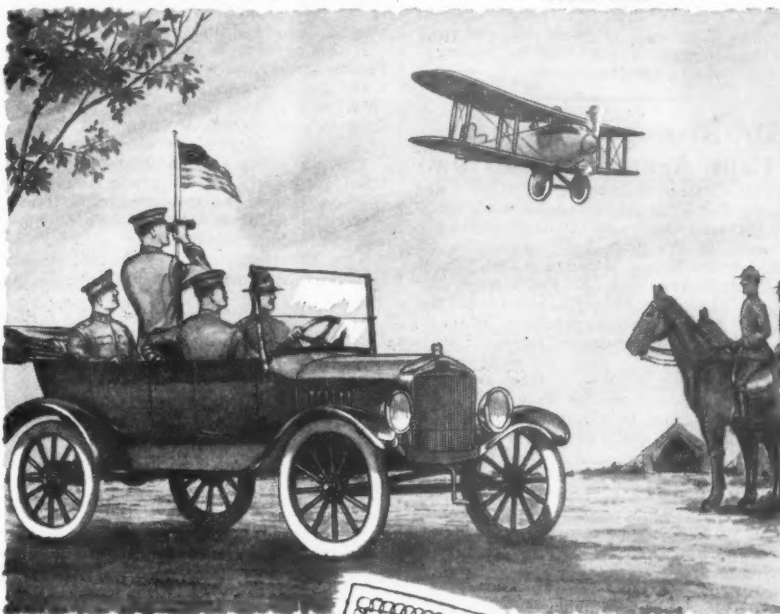

Alertness is a preeminent quality of a soldier. Recognition of superiors in accordance with prescribed customs of the service is a direct manifestation of alertness, and an outward sign that the soldier is a member of Sykes' Regulars and is ready to serve no matter what the occasion. It will be instilled in all ranks that the rendition of proper respect and courtesy is the unmistakable mark of this Regiment. An accurate index of a soldier's training and morale is his military bearing and courtesy. The smart and alert soldier indicates he is proud of Himself, his Regiment, and his Country.

Each soldier will be thoroughly impressed with the responsibility that devolves upon him to reflect high credit on his uniform, his Regiment and his Country when he is away from his post of duty.

Discipline in Sykes' Regulars will be reasonable and flexible—but never lax. It will be so developed that it will result in pride, efficiency and the ultimate of esprit de corps.

it's been the Policy of the services since 1922

Even though Ford was still making the Model "T" back in 1922 when USAA was organized, automobiles were already beginning to take on what was then referred to as the "streamlined look."

Horses then outnumbered automobiles but people had begun to talk about traffic problems and accidents were on the increase.

To meet the need of dependable low-cost automobile insurance for officers of the U.S. Armed Forces faced with their varied assignments, United Services Automobile Association was organized.

During all of its 33 years, USAA has been a non-profit organization, managed by active and retired officers. The savings made by pooling insurance funds of a preferred risk group are returned to policyholders in the form of liberal dividends. For many years USAA policyholders in the various States have enjoyed savings exceeding 40%. During 1954 nearly 6 million dollars in dividends were returned on 282,843 policies.

Membership in USAA is open to active and retired commissioned and warrant officers of the U.S. Armed Forces in the U.S.A., its possessions and territories; in Canada, Cuba, and the Canal Zone; in Japan, the Philippines, and certain U.S. military bases in the Pacific as well as Western Continental Europe.

With a USAA policy you enjoy a confident feeling of protection. You are insured with the oldest, largest and strongest non-profit organization serving officers of the U.S. Armed Forces with automobile insurance. You know that you are covered in numerous areas where our armed forces serve, and claims will be quickly settled, even in the most out-of-the-way places.

When it's time to insure . . . be sure to give yourself the best . . . and save, too. Insure with USAA!

What Does It Take To Be Junior Adm?

What does it take to be named the junior line officer on a list of 30 captains selected for flag rank? The officer who holds that distinction is Capt. Lawson P. Ramage, USN.

Here is a story from Headquarters, Commander Submarine Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, which relates the rear admiral-designate's service background. He is Chief of Staff at New London, Conn.

Before taking his present assignment here on 16 July, Captain Ramage attended the Naval War College in Newport, R. I. After graduation from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1931, Captain Ramage served aboard the destroyers USS Dickerson and Lawrence, and the cruiser USS Louisville. He graduated from the Submarine School here in 1935 and was assigned to the submarine S-29.

In 1938 he returned to Annapolis for Post Graduate Instruction, after which he served as Executive Officer of the destroyer USS Sands.

At the outbreak of World War II, he was on the Staff of Commander Submarines, Scouting Force. He made his first war patrol in the submarine USS Grenadier (SS-212), and, as navigator on that patrol, was awarded the Silver Star medal.

In 1942, he took command of the USS Trout (SS-202). For action against the enemy the Trout was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation, and Captain Ramage received his first Navy Cross.

He was detached from the Trout a year later and took command of the submarine Parche. While on patrol during July, 1944, Captain Ramage boldly penetrated a screen of heavily armed Japanese escorts to attack a large convoy. He launched a perilous surface attack which, in 46 minutes of thrilling action, succeeded in torpedoing five ships, of which four were sunk. Throughout the pre-dawn engagement he remained alone on the bridge to direct further attacks on the enemy and save his ship from ramming and heavy crossfire. For this action, at the risk of his life, he was awarded the Medal of Honor and a second Navy Cross, while the Parche won the Presidential Unit Citation. From January 1945 to April 1946, he served as Personnel Officer on the Staff of Commander Submarine Force, Pacific Fleet. After this tour of duty, he commanded Submarine Division 52, at Pearl Harbor. In August, 1947, he reported to the Office of the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations (Guided Missiles) in Washington, D. C. Upon his detachment in 1950 he attended the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va.

In July 1950, Captain Ramage was ordered to the Staff of ComSubLant here, as Readiness and New Developments Officer. He next commanded Submarine Squadron 6 at Norfolk and in February, 1953, assumed command of the attack cargo ship Rankin (AKA-103). From that command he went to the Naval War College, where he recently completed the Senior Course.

Captain Ramage is married to the former Barbara A. Pine, daughter of the late VADM James Pine, USN, the wartime Superintendent of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy at New London. They have four children. His official home address is 46 Trinity Ave., Lowville, N. Y.

Forrestal Commissioning Is Set For 1 Oct.

The USS Forrestal, world's largest warship, will be commissioned at 2 P.M., Saturday, 1 October 1955, at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, Va.

RAdm. I. N. Kiland, USN, Commandant of the Fifth Naval District, will read the commissioning directive. Capt. Roy L. Johnson, USN, of 1004 Highland Avenue, Falls Church, Va., will take command of the new warship. He has been selected for flag rank.

Prior to the actual delivery of the ship to the Navy, the Forrestal will undergo builder's and Navy acceptance trials. The Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Company will take the carrier to sea on Aug. 16 and 17 for tests. On 29 Aug. and 1 Sept. the Forrestal will again go to sea, this time with a Navy inspection team on board.

On 29 Sept., two days before the commissioning ceremony, the Forrestal will be moved from the Newport News construction docks to the Naval Shipyard at Portsmouth.

The commissioning ceremony will climax more than three years of construction work on the new carrier. Her keel was laid in July 1952, and she was launched in December 1954. Since then the 1036-foot aircraft carrier has been berthed at a fitting-out pier in Newport News, where catapult, electronics and other types of equipment were installed. The dock trial test of her engines was successfully held in June.

Nearly 60,000 tons of metal have gone into the construction of the Forrestal. Her width of 252 feet is enough to hold the liners United States and America side by side. The ship will have a crew of 3,500.

Three sister ships presently are under construction. They are the Saratoga, Ranger and Independence.

SAC Institutes New Airman Promotion System

Under a new Strategic Air Command promotion system, airmen rated in the "outstanding" category on the Airman Performance Report, AF Form 75, will have the opportunity of being promoted ahead of their contemporaries with higher seniority.

The new SAC regulation, 39-6, provides for the promotion of airmen who are best qualified to perform the duties of the higher grade. Airmen who do not fall into the exceptionally well qualified category will be considered for promotion according to date of rank, length of service and age.

The exceptionally well qualified portion of the promotion quota will not exceed the following percentage of the total quota: to master sergeant, no restriction; to technical sergeant, 80 per cent; to staff sergeant, 60 per cent; to airman first class, 40 per cent; and to airman second class, 20 per cent.

Airmen considered for promotion to non-com grades must possess either a primary or an additional AFSC in which a command-wide vacancy by career field subdivision exists. All recommendations for promotion of airmen will be initiated on SAC Form 415, and be prepared in one copy. These forms are now being distributed to the field.

New Personnel Records System Planned By SAC

A new system for centralizing personnel records, which has been tested at Eighth Air Force bases and at Fairchild AFB, Wash., for the past three years, soon will become effective throughout the Strategic Air Command.

The centralized unit personnel system provides for records centers at wing level for all squadrons under its jurisdiction and a centralized section at air base group of non-tactical squadrons. A conference of personnel representatives will be held at SAC Headquarters to iron out last-minute snags before the new regulation explaining the system is published.

The purpose of CUPs is to even out the manning and experience level of personnel specialists, which currently varies among the squadrons. The effect will be to move all personnel records from squadron orderly rooms to wing and air base group levels.

ACADEMY LIAISON

Lt. Col. Fred Noonan, USAF, who has been assigned to the Joint Construction Agency in Paris for the past three years, has been named Hq. USAF Liaison Officer on Air Force Academy Construction in Colorado Springs, Colo.

TTAFF directs the operations of the 10 military and technical training bases of the Air Force, at which are stationed nearly one-fifth of all USAF personnel. It conducts all non-flying training for the Air Force.

Education Program Stressed By CrewTAF

Crew Training Air Force is placing special emphasis on elementary, intermediate and high school education programs designed to qualify airmen for future training in Air Force specialties.

The courses, open to all CrewTAF airmen whose Armed Forces Qualification Test scores are below a specified level, require the students to spend approximately two hours a day, five days a week, for eleven weeks, in the classroom. So far, approximately 620 airmen are receiving instruction in language and arithmetic.

Both military and civilian teachers conduct the classes. The program costs amount to less than $16 per student for approximately 11 weeks of instruction, and costs the Air Force less than $1.46 per student for one week.

The goal of the CrewTAF education program is to raise the educational level and skill potential of airmen, preparing them to meet the technical training requirements of the Air Force. A recent survey showed that approximately 2000 CrewTAF airmen are eligible to participate in the program.

His new job will deal with air defense, particularly with the training of crews for Air Defense Direction Centers which safeguards major U. S. cities.

During his term as director of Unit #2, Dr. Carver supervised the study of 10 or 15 major problems, some of which are still continuing. Notable among these projects is the "Fighter" study which revealed that intelligent, athletic-type Americans make better fighters and soldiers than their less-educated companions.

NATO's "Carte Blanche" Air Training Maneuver Simulates 335 Atomic Strikes

"An outstanding success" was the estimate received by Fourth Allied Tactical Air Force from Allied Air Forces Central Europe on Carte Blanche, NATO air maneuver in which more than 2500 aircraft of 11 NATO nations participated.

AIRCENT conducted the exercise in which the 2d Allied Tactical Air Force, commanded by Air Marshal Sir Harry Broadhurst, RAF, was assigned the role of aggressor, and 4th ATAF, commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, USAF, was the defender.

The exercise was designed to provide training for NATO air forces in conjunction with external support forces and national air defense systems of the Central European area. During the week-long maneuver both sides practiced and are analyzing operations and procedures during a simulated period leading up to and through the initial days of a major war against an enemy with comparable air power and atomic capability. Emphasis was placed upon operations and procedures for obtaining the assistance of atomic strike forces and supporting those forces; passive defense against atomic attacks, maximum redeployment and operation under field conditions and air defense.

HOSTILITIES BEGAN with a simulated mass attack by 2d ATAF, composed of British, Dutch and Belgian units, reinforced with elements of the Norwegian and Danish air forces.

Fourth ATAF detected and intercepted the enemy's simulated mass attack, immediately sought and promptly received authority to strike back.

In 12 minutes the initial counter attack was launched by General Lee from 4 ATAF field headquarters, concealed in a forest in West Germany. It took place in the early morning and was directed against air fields in Northwest Germany, Belgium and Holland.

Thereafter, for four days, it was an "open" maneuver without scenario, with each side left to its own resources and imagination.

Air Commodore P. Wykeham-Barnes, RAF, AIRCENT Chief of Operations, explained the maneuver developed evidence of capability of either side to destroy the other in real warfare, but for practice purposes no victory was sought because it would have shortened the training period.

Although results will not be analyzed for several months, Air Commodore Wykeham-Barnes said a total of 12,347 sorties were flown by both sides, with only two fatal accidents, in relatively good European weather, and approximately 335 atomic strikes were simulated. Fourth ATAF simulated the launching of a number of Matador missiles during the maneuver.

"THE EXERCISE HAS DEMONSTRATED that NATO has a powerful and flexible air organization," said Wykeham-Barnes, "that is able to give us, with the power of our armies and navies, a concentrated reaction to any aggression. It has greatly increased our capability to keep the peace."

No actual weapons were used during the maneuver which was slanted entirely toward training of a deterrent force. During Carte Blanche, General Lee who normally commands both 4 ATAF and the 12th U. S. Air Force, turned over command of the 12th to his deputy, Brig. Gen. William M. Gross. The RCAF First Division, commanded by Air Vice Marshal Hugh Campbell, with headquarters at Metz, France, and the Premier Corp Arienne Tacticue, French Air Force, commanded by Brig. Gen. Norbert Bisson, are other elements of 4 ATAF. They were reinforced during the maneuver by squadrons from the Greek, Italian and Turkish air forces.

Robins C.O. Departs

Col. Wesley S. Calverley, USAF, Commander of Robins AFB, Ga., since May of last year, left the base this week for an assignment in Rome.

Succeeding Colonel Calverley will be Col. Norman C. Spencer, jr., USAF, now stationed in Newfoundland and scheduled to report to Robins AFB for duty about the first of September.

START NEW CLUB AT SAC HOME

Construction is under way at Offutt AFB, Nebr., on a new $361,000 Officers Club. When it is completed NCOs will take over the present officers club.

Located in the southern part of the base, the Club is scheduled for completion in March 1956. The new club building will be constructed of concrete block and will be a one story affair 161 by 99 feet. It will include a dining room, kitchen, offices and private dining room.

The Offutt Officers Club is part of a SAC-wide building program which originally provided for 56 buildings, including 19 service clubs, 16 NCO clubs, and 16 officers messes and clubs.

TAC Gets 3d AF

Will Work With Army

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott announced 11 July that the 19th Air Force has been activated by the Air Force's Tactical Air Command at Foster AFB, Victoria, Tex. The new Air Force is designed to provide a highly mobile headquarters, with a major portion of its peacetime operations devoted to the conduct of field training exercises with Army forces located within the continental limits of the U. S.

In addition, the 19th will be maintained in constant readiness to move to any area in the world in the event of threatened aggression.

Selection of Foster for the headquarters of the 19th was based largely on the major training role its units will have with Army forces located in close proximity in the area and the established fixed base facilities already there, the Air Force said.

The 19th Air Force will be Tactical Air Command's third air force organization, and will consist of fighter-bomber, day fighter and light bombardment units. TAC's other two air forces are the 9th Air Force, with headquarters at Shaw AFB, South Carolina, and the 18th Air Force, with headquarters at Donaldson AFB, South Carolina.

Strength At The Summit. Every man and woman in the Armed Forces will be heartened by the brighter prospects for world peace as a result of the Big Four Meeting at Geneva. None can know the horror of atomic warfare better than those who serve in uniform; that is why members of the Services—possibly even more than other citizens—will be especially encouraged by the sparkling leadership of President Eisenhower during the sessions at the Summit.

The Services can feel a real sense of participation in the President's dynamic proposals for more peaceful relations between East and West. The Chief Executive could not have been so effective a spokesman in the cause of peace had he not addressed the world from a position of military strength.

The power of the U. S. Armed Forces, together with the fortified military resources of our allies, permitted the President to take the initiative in outlining to the Russians a program to reduce world tensions and to avert nuclear warfare. All will hope fervently that Geneva will be a major turning point in history, and that the deliberations there will lead the nations of the world to seek answers to their problems in discussion rather than in destruction.

But the President warned in his report to the Nation on Monday night that "we don't proceed recklessly." Mr. Eisenhower emphasized that "we must go prudently and cautiously, both in reaching conclusions and in subsequent actions. We cannot afford to be negligent or complacent," he said.

These words from the Commander-in-Chief will guide our military planners in the months ahead as they prepare a budget which goes into effect next July. As Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson told newsmen at Quantico, Va., it is still much too early to foresee possible specific reductions in military strength as a result of the talks at Geneva. The United States and our allies must remain militarily strong, for it is this strength, as exemplified by the Strategic Air Command, by the Army divisions in Europe and the Far East, by the powerful Sixth and Seventh Fleets and by the combat-ready Marine Corps divisions and air wings, which provides a mighty force for peace. When the Armed Forces are weak, as was the case in 1950, the Communists are tempted to risk war to achieve their ends. When the Armed Forces are strong, as in 1955, the Communists are more inclined to exercise caution and restraint. The Summit talks of peace were grounded in the strength of the Free World military forces.

Family Medicare: Answer the Challenge. Despite the fact that still another year has been lost in making a strong effort to attain the White House endorsed objective of better medical care for Service families, the Defense Department has a chance now to score new gains in this vital morale area. The question is whether or not the Pentagon will have the courage to present its case in forceful terms.

Failure of the Defense Department to sponsor legislation which would achieve the goal of improved family medical care, outlined by President Eisenhower last January in his State of the Union Message, is lamentable. Why the Pentagon was not able to follow through on the Chief Executive's promise of action is difficult to understand, but the delay means there can be no action on Capitol Hill until next year.

What of the interim? Recent news stories in THE JOURNAL, including reports sent us from anxious parents at bases throughout the Nation, show that the family medical care situation, instead of getting better, is worsening rapidly as a result of a shortage of doctors. Last week, for example, a front-page article told of curtailed child care at huge Ft. Bragg, N. C., where only one pediatrician is available.

The Defense Department can alleviate the family care situation. Secretary Wilson and his associates have only to stop rejecting the repeated appeals by the Surgeons General for an increased ratio of doctors. So far, the presentations made by the Surgeons General have been kept under wraps. There is a way now for them to state their case to the public.

Secretary Wilson has asked a newly named Special Assistant, former Assistant Defense Secretary Charles Coolidge, to look into all the recommendations of the Hoover Commission which have a bearing on the Armed Services. One major proposal made by the Hoover Commission would eliminate free family medical care in the United States.

Survivor Bill Creates Problem

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

From the most recent account in THE JOURNAL it appears that chances of final Congressional action this year on the Survivor Benefits bill are bleak if not hopeless.

From my viewpoint, and I am sure, from that of many others, it will be unfortunate if this legislation, labelled a "must" by President Eisenhower, is delayed until 1956; yet this seems probable.

The proposal has been kicking around for a long time now. Many of us are finding it difficult to formulate carefully thought-out insurance programs for our families because of the hold-up on the survivor plan.

The Hardy Select Committee did a wonderful job of drafting the complex bill and smoothing its passage through the House. Is their hard work to be shelved simply because the Senate Finance Committee can't make up its mind whether it wants to push the measure?

When one House passes a bill on which extensive hearings have been held and in which so many different groups and agencies concur, it seems only fair that the least the other chamber could do is act on the bill as expeditiously as possible.

I hope you will point out that the Senate should waste no time in winding up work on a bill that affects every man and woman in uniform and their families.

Leave Service For Congress

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I wonder if the "powers that be" realize that many of their young officers are spending more time overseas than at home?

Of fifteen years service, my husband has spent eight years overseas, and frankly, I am getting sick and tired of it.

First, we do not like being so far from home—the expense alone involved in reaching home for emergencies is impossible, to say nothing of morale. Second, I am tired of the constant separations these overseas moves involve. And third, with the Status of Forces Agreement, we lose all our privileges as American citizens. This is not only a hardship, it is an outrage.

And then we must humbly beg a 10% pay raise while our Lawmakers generously give themselves one 50% pay raise after another. They are making their jobs so attractive, we will soon all resign from the Service and run for Congress.

ONE SERVICE WIFE

Keep The Spotlight On

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

My family and I (there are five of us) have been following your articles on medical care with a great deal of interest.

For a long time we had hoped this Congress would be the one to straighten out some of the problems which all of us in uniform face when we are assigned to foreign posts and leave our families behind to fend for themselves.

We now know that we have been foolhardy. We now wonder if Congress will ever wake up to their responsibilities and take a close look at this problem. Are the Senators and Representatives afraid of the Medical profession, as the Medical profession is afraid of any plan which might take away even a small part of their enormous income? What is the answer?

We hope you will continue to turn your spotlight on dependent medical care and that eventually some action will be taken to provide for the illness and injuries which so often befall Service wives and children when their husbands are in remote posts.

LCDR., USN.

taries (Health and Medical) Frank B. Berry and (Manpower and Personnel) Carter L. Burgess, and with reports from the Surgeons General, Mr. Coolidge can meet the threat of the Hoover Commission's blow at family care, which incidentally got nowhere at all on Capitol Hill.

But the Coolidge Report should go one step farther. It should present to the public the views of the Surgeons General and other top military leaders regarding the urgent need for steps to provide satisfactory family care.

THE JOURNAL believes that even if the Defense Department should decide not to take up the fight for improved family medical care, aroused Members of Congress will carry the crucial morale campaign forward next year—provided they are given proper ammunition.

The Services will be watching to see whether or not the Pentagon leadership will meet the challenge of further curtailments in family medical care. They will hope that if the Defense Department avoids a seemingly inevitable showdown with the American Medical Association and delays further implementation of the President's plan to improve family care, that Congress will take this matter into its own hands next year. One way or another, the challenge to a traditional part of military life—family medical care—must be met.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Troops from Europe and newly trained men will constitute an army of 7,000,000 for the final blow against Japan, General Jacob L. Devers, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, said at a Washington press conference. Some radical changes in training methods will be made, General Devers stated. Much attention will be given training for night fighting. The use of searchlights was very effective in Germany, he said, and the same methods will be applied to war in the Pacific.

50 Years Ago—The camp of U. S. Marines at Midway Island in the Pacific has been destroyed by a storm. General Elliot, the commanding officer of the Marine Corps, has received a telegram to that effect, but none of the men was injured. Midway Island is used for a station for the trans-Pacific cable.

90 Years Ago—Washington is emerging from military rule; orders have recently been issued discontinuing all patrols through the avenues and streets. General Augur is hastening along the muster-out of troops in his Department. All of the troops in that Department, numbering about 40,000, are to be paid within a week, about six million dollars being required for that purpose.

A Top Navy Admiral Tells How Oldest War College Trains Future Leaders

U. S. NAVAL WAR COLLEGE
Newport, R. I.

By LYNDE D. McCORMICK
Vice Admiral, U. S. Navy

THE art and science of modern warfare, an extremely complex web of political, economic, social and military factors, requires of the naval officer of today a knowledge of these factors, the fundamentals common to all wars; and an understanding also, of the interrelations of his own service with all of the others affecting our national, military and naval strategies.

The Naval War College, oldest of the armed services' war colleges, provides the means for officers not only to increase their professional knowledge, as it has since it was founded by Commodore Stephen B. Luce in 1884; but also the means for them to meet the requirements of a world community being influenced by rapid changes, by advancing scientific developments, and resulting altered strategic concepts. It is the capstone of the Navy's educational system.

While the concentric base for all of the courses at the Naval War College is sea power, with all of its ramifications, not only from a military standpoint, but in relation to all other factors of national power, the core is the development of the mental power of the officers and the advancement of their understanding of the fundamentals underlying the complexity of world conditions today.

By virtue of these facts the Naval War College courses encompass considerably more than the study and use of weapons, or of minor tactics and strategy. Consideration of the art and science of naval warfare is placed in its proper perspective to the best of the staff's ability, with political, economic and other factors, in an effort to help officers prepare for higher command by increasing their basic professional knowledge and to broaden the foundation of their professional judgment.

IN AN ASSESSMENT of the scope, methods and objectives of the Naval War College, it is well to remember that the College adheres to the classical definition: "a body of equals gathered together to work on matters of common interest." A corollary to this is that results achieved, individually, are very much up to the officers themselves. The application of this definition results also in the fact that the Naval War College advocates no fixed set of rules by which wars may be conducted and battles won, nor does it inculcate the belief that an exclusive solution to a strategic problem exists.

The maturity and motivation of its students has permitted the effective application of the principle of learning by individual initiative. The students are furnished a vast amount of informative and interpretive material related to modern warfare, but no official dogma, doctrine or accepted solution is advocated.

The search for guiding principles is a joint effort of staff and students; no teacher-pupil relation exists. Conclusions and concepts are those of the individual. Students are encouraged to exchange their ideas with each other and with members of the staff. In this way each shares in the wealth of knowledge reposing in the staff and student body as a whole, including as they do, not only naval line and staff officers, but also officers from the other military services and representatives of the State Department and civilian agencies.

Academic freedom and the inclusion of officers from all of the armed services, original concepts of its founder, despite the requirements of ever changing curricula, schedules and techniques have endured at the Naval War College until today. Its mission, "to further an understanding of the fundamentals of warfare, international relations, and interservice operations, with emphasis on their application to future naval warfare, in order to prepare officers for higher command" is thus being carried forward.

Subjects studied at the Naval War College are those required in the sound exercise of naval command. These are strategy, including all factors of national strategy; tactics and logistics. The resident courses include all three with emphasis determined by the needs and mission of the specific course. Prescribed reading, group discussions, and lectures supplement the students' work on individual papers, in group projects and in operations problems. Much of the application is simultaneous with related studies in order that principles learned may be fixed by prompt application.

The Naval War College conducts two types of courses: Resident and Correspondence. Ultimate benefits, new objectives, timeliness and other factors are considered in a constant scrutiny of both types of courses for possible improvement.

The largest single unit of students at the Naval War College is in the Command and Staff Course. Designed for Lieutenant Commanders and Junior Commanders, or equivalent ranks, this course emphasizes the operational functions of command and the organization, functions and procedures of operational staffs.

PRINCIPAL RESIDENT course at the Naval War College is the Course in Naval Warfare. It is in two parts, each one academic year in length. Both, however, are of the same academic level, and students may be ordered to either, or both years. Primarily Naval Warfare I is concerned with technical ability and competence of the officers and emphasizes the integrated employment of the elements of naval power; while Naval Warfare II emphasizes the strategic employment of sea and naval power in the furtherance of national objectives. These courses are for senior commanders and captains, or equivalent rank. The Course of Advanced Study of Strategy and Sea Power, embracing a comprehensive study and research in the basic natures of war and sea power, is for flag officers, selectees for flag rank and captains who have completed a resident course at the College. There is also the Flag Officer's Refresher Course, for flag officers and officers selected to flag rank, which is adjusted to the needs of the individual.

Correspondence courses offered by the Naval War College are: Strategy and Tactics, Operational Planning and Staff Organization, Logistics, International Law and Advanced International Law.

These courses are available for regular and reserve naval officers of and above the rank of Lieutenant (junior grade) and for officers, regular and reserve, of corresponding rank from the Marine Corps, Army, Air Force and Coast Guard. In addition, the Naval War College conducts two associate courses of two weeks' duration for selected Reserve Officers: The Senior Reserve Officers' Course, and the Course in Combat Staff Techniques and Operational Planning. A team of staff officers from the College this year will deliver a series of lectures to Reserve Officers in their home Districts, thus bringing them up to current thinking in Naval procedures and operational planning.

IN ORDER TO KEEP the College informed of the broader aspects of the national research and analysis program, and also to keep under continuing analysis the impact of new scientific developments on the future trend of naval warfare, a Research and Analysis Department was established a few years ago. This department monitors limited research into naval strategy, logistics and related tactics being conducted by outside agencies.

The work of the several departments into which the College is administratively divided is supervised and coordinated by the Chief of Staff under the direction of the President, Naval War College. Army, Air Force and State Department Advisors provide interservice liaison and guidance on those portions of curricula pertaining to the roles of these services. The Ernest J. King Chair of Maritime History, the Chester W. Nimitz Chair of Social and Political Philosophy, and chairs of International Law and Physical Science assist in the conduct of curricula within individual competences, also.

The College, housed in four buildings, has its headquarters in Luce Hall, commanding a beautiful view of Narragansett Bay. Luce Hall was built in 1892. Mahan Hall was completed in 1904. Pringle Hall was completed in 1934 and Sims Hall was commissioned in 1942. All are named after former presidents of the College, who with their successors, contributed to the historical role of the College and to the maintenance of the high standards under which it is providing leadership in the field of sea power for the armed services and for the United States of America.

Ft. Belvoir's Engineer School Varied Tasks Are Described By Maj. Gen. Prentiss

By MAJ. GEN. LOUIS W. PRENTISS, USA
Commanding General, The Engineer Center

THE essential training center required to support the world wide operations of the Corps of Engineers is The Engineer School. The curriculum of its varied and complex training activities is derived from the many diverse tasks of the Corps of Engineers and the numerous and different types of engineer units required to perform the functions and services required by the U. S. Army.

Tracing its history back to the first engineer school at West Point in 1794, The Engineer School bears the distinction of being the oldest service school in the Army. In 1802, the Corps of Engineers was given the responsibility for operation of the U. S. Military Academy. The Academy was the first technical engineering school in the new republic and provided the engineers needed to explore, map and develop the new areas being acquired by the growing nation. In 1866, the USMA was turned over to the Army at large for operation and during this same year The Engineer School was established at Willets Point, N. Y. After a move to Washington Barracks (Ft. Lesley J. McNair) in 1901, The Engineer School finally reached its present home at Ft. Belvoir, Va., then Camp Humphreys, in 1919. It is of interest to note that George Washington received his early training as a surveyor on the Belvoir Plantation on which The Engineer School is presently located.

THE MISSION of The Engineer School is basically to provide instruction in military engineering for resident and nonresident students. The School develops and standardizes the instruction and training of engineer officers in the techniques and tactics of the Corps of Engineers, and further instructs officers of all components of the Department of Defense in the functions of the Corps of Engineers. Instruction is also provided for selected enlisted men of all components for the purpose of developing specialists in engineering skills. The School assists in the development of engineer doctrine, techniques and equipment for use of the armed services. It prepares, revises and reviews training literature and special training publications required by the Department of Defense. The School provides extension courses for all components and support for National Guard and Reserve instruction and a program of instruction for officers of Allied Nations. Liaison is maintained with other service schools and agencies of the National Military Establishment and certain civilian technical schools and colleges. Studies and research projects pertaining to the Corps of Engineers are made and information disseminated to all interested agencies of the Department of Defense pertaining to instruction, training methods and training materials developed at The Engineer School.

TO ACCOMPLISH THE BROAD OBJECTIVES of its mission the organization of The Engineer School must necessarily be flexible. Consequently, the School is organized along functional lines into six major Departments, a Combat Development Group and three principal administering Divisions.

The Assistant Commandant, Brig. Gen. Gerald E. Galloway, assisted by his staff, controls, plans, and directs the operations of the School under general supervision of the Commandant. The missions of the six major operating Departments of the School are all logical task assignments in order that the School will meet its objectives.

The Department of Military Art is responsible for the doctrine, technique, and instruction on general military subjects in the fields of staff organization and functions, tactics, weapons and logistics, integrating, where pertinent, the tactical use of atomic weapons. All instruction is planned and presented with emphasis upon leadership development. The Department is directed by Col. David W. Helman, whose wide experience includes such assignments as engineer troop commander, assistant Air Engineer, and Engineer Supply Control Officer. Close and continuous liaison with USAF and USMC assures maximum coordination in areas of common interest.

Col. Walter H. Parsons, Jr., is the Director of The Department of Engineering. This Department is responsible for the doctrine, technique and instruction on technical engineering subjects. This includes bridging, pioneering, military construction, post engineer functions, planning and construction phases of all engineering projects required by the Army and Air Force, as well as the functions of The Corps of Engineers in Civil Works, and the theory and effects of atomic weapons.

THE DEPARTMENT OF TOPOGRAPHY is currently under the direction of Col. Alfred M. Eschbach. It consists of drafting, photomapping, surveying, and map reproduction branches. Among the subjects taught in this Department are included aerial photo topography, construction drawing and blueprint reading, engineer and topographic drafting, photo-mapping. Engineer and topographic surveying map reproduction, and topographic computing.

Col. Gerald P. McCarthy is the Director of the Department of Mechanical and Technical Equipment. This department is responsible for the doctrine, technique and all instruction related to the maintenance, operation and application of engineer heavy equipment, motor vehicle maintenance, water supply, electronics and utilities, and special engineer equipment maintenance. It also provides instruction in specialist-type subjects. To fulfill its responsibilities, the department has in many instances organized

MEMO For Journal Readers

THE BURGESS COMMITTEE, which has been looking into the complex Prisoner of War problem with the objective of formulating a unified policy for the Services, will issue its report during the first two weeks in August, unless SecDef Wilson grants the group an extension. The report is expected essentially to reaffirm the traditional indoctrination to troops that they are to give only their name, rank and service number. THE POW COMMISSION, on which General John E. Hull, USA-Ret., is vice-chairman, will take cognizance of the unique situation created by Communist brainwashing techniques. The group will recognize that every person has a breaking point under the pressure of physical or mental anguish. THE BURGESS GROUP will say, therefore, that when a man fails to meet the test of the name, rank and service number requirement, he will not necessarily be punished; but he will be held accountable.

MANY DEFENSE OFFICIALS were disturbed this week over news stories which said that the three turncoats would be arrested upon their arrival in the United States. The Services are usually extremely careful not to make any such forecast or announcement until official action is taken, lest an individual's rights be abrogated.

NOT GIVING UP, the Air Force intends to press again for Congressional O.K. in '56 of legislation authorizing cash bonus payments to servicemen who make suggestions which result in substantial savings in money and manpower for the U.S. Government. At present, the Army and Air Force are using non-appropriated funds for such payments.

DEPUTY DEFENSE SEC'Y DESIGNATE Reuben Robertson could get his feet wet at the Pentagon by resolving a problem that has confounded at least three of his predecessors—namely, what to do about the thousands of Special Category Army With Air Force (SCARWAF) personnel. They are Army Engineers assigned to the Air Force. That controversial problem has been kicked from one end of the Pentagon to the other and back over a period of years.

INTER-SERVICE TRANSFER legislation is being prepared for the next session of Congress. Such a measure has long been in discussion at the Pentagon, but has been held up by disagreements among the Services. With the RESERVE FORCES BILL out of the way, it's a good bet that Asst. SecDef Burgess, Pentagon manpower boss, will move in on a number of areas where the Services have been in long disagreement.

ONE PASSOVER AND OUT may become a new self-imposed rule for Navy captains. In the past, some officers who failed to make rear admiral on the first try were picked up by the next board—14 have made it this way since fiscal '51.

THE FLAG BOARD which named 39 new rear admirals this week did not select a single officer who previously had been turned down.

AIR FORCE JAILS may be reduced to save money, manpower and provide improved handling of prisoners. At present, the AF has 139 confinement facilities in the U.S. for about 2,800 prisoners at a cost of $16 million per year. AT SHEPPARD AFB, TEX., an experiment is being tried in which confinement functions of 19 bases are being consolidated. The test will take at least a year.

PAPER PULPING MACHINES are being purchased by some of the Services for destruction of classified documents; that technique is said to save man-hours in comparison with burning the papers. One model can grind up 1,000 pounds of papers per hour.

ARMY PROFESSIONALS who know something of the problems involved are giving Gen. John E. Dahlquist, USA, top praise for his leadership of the Continental Army Command, formerly Army Field Forces. A big believer in getting out to the units, General Dahlquist is credited with putting a new snap in the Army's training program, both among Active and Reserve forces. AS A RESULT OF AGE, he's due to retire early next year. Successor figures to be Lt. Gen. Willard G. Wyman, USA, recently named Deputy CG at CONARC.

TIME FLIES BY at the Pentagon and sometimes decisions get delayed. For example, SecDef Wilson said in late March that DoD would soon name a chief for the Security Review Division of the Office of Public Information. At the end of July, that appointment had yet to be made. ALSO STILL VACANT, after 4 months, were the civilian information chief jobs for the Services. Mr. Wilson had "suggested" they be appointed.

A NEW ERA in Air Force flying training is in the works. It will see use of a jet trainer at the primary level. Cessna Aircraft Co. of Wichita, Kans., begins delivery in Dec. of the new T-37A twin-jet trainer. AIR FORCE SOURCES say that an 8,000-hour flight evaluation program will be conducted. Eleven trainers are due for delivery by May 1956, with production set for 6 per month in June, and upward to a goal of 17 per month.

THE RESERVE PROBLEM in the Air Force is pointed up with disclosure that less than 1 out of 10 mobilization assignees are enlisted men. Whereas the Air National Guard has about 9 airmen for each officer, the ratio in all phases of the Reserve is roughly 1½ officers for each airman. Air Force authorities are hopeful INCREASED NUMBERS of EM leaving active duty will sign up for active participation in the Reserve.

ARMY SEC'Y BRUCKER, sensitive to proper rank-for-the-job as a result of his longtime political experience, may initiate action to restore the top Army personnel job to a three-star billet. That's the rank held by Navy and Air Force manpower chiefs. The Army G-1 was a THREE-STAR JOB until the end of General Collins' tenure as CofS; General Ridgway held to the two-star status. Chances are believed 50-50 that General Brucker and General Taylor will get the Army back on par with the Navy and Air Force in this assignment where prestige counts high—not only at the Pentagon, but on Capitol Hill.

MACHINE TOOL MANUFACTURERS are complaining against Defense—especially Air Force—purchase of machine tools from European firms. They claim that some of the specifications allow consideration of inferior and less durable equipment. More rigid specifications and inspection are demanded.

JET ENGINE BUILDERS believe the recent directive to standardize their product will result in ratings for turbojets of 7,000, 10,500, 16,000 and 24,000 pounds thrust. Each class is required to be 50% greater than the preceding one. It is expected turboprop engines will be in 4,200, 6,300, 9,500 and 14,000 horsepower classifications. Some of the promising jets under development would fit into these categories.

GUIDED MISSILE COMPETITION among the Services will be continued indefinitely. There's no intention at present to give any one Service the primary responsibility in this field. Ultimately, that could be necessary to avoid unnecessary duplication and to assure maximum utilization of available resources, including scarce technical manpower.

Here's How AF Families Are Helped

■ MANHATTAN BEACH AFS, N. Y. Something new and greatly needed has been added in the way of services for military dependents at Manhattan Beach AFS, Brooklyn, N. Y., the Air Force's recently established Processing Center, commanded by Col. John L. Turner, USAF. This service is called the "Dependents' Assistance Program." Its goal is to fulfill the mission the name implies.

None know better than do Service wives the many headaches and problems which beset a household with each new change of station which takes the serviceman and his family to completely new and different surroundings. A list of these perplexing problems would be endless, with such needs as housing, schools for the children, shopping centers, churches and numerous other various and sundry details required to fulfill the needs of daily living.

This is where "Dependents' Assistance" steps in to lend a most welcome helping hand. Procedure for obtaining assistance is simply a matter of making a telephone call or going personally to the office where problems may be discussed and where every effort is made to arrive at a solution or give aid to the fullest extent possible.

Patterned after the program originated by the Strategic Air Command and revised to the needs of the 225th Personnel Processing Group, an overseas processing center handling incoming and outgoing Air Force personnel, the "Dependents' Assistance Program" now functions as a part of the Personal Affairs Section.

Working with the unit are committees composed of members of the Officers' and NCO Wives' Clubs, who are doing future planning for arising needs and solutions of various problems. An Emergency Committee takes care of financing for emergency transportation, food, rental, etc., and a Standing Committee for housing and local community services. Individuals are appointed to handle various sections such as housing, which includes maintaining home listings and assistance in locating housing, also maintaining and disseminating information on such things as baby-sitters, part-time jobs, and so on. Another, is a liaison working with the Information Services Office for the purpose of preparing brochures and information covering all facilities of this base and the surrounding locale, to be distributed to all newcoming families. Finally, the section includes services relating to housing both emergency and permanent, emergency funds for food, transportation, and assistance in finding a part-time job or baby-sitting services for employed wives.

Although the program is presently geared to specifically handle the dependents of permanent party personnel, it will soon provide the same service for the dependents of transient personnel passing through the station and the dependents of Air Force personnel who fill civilian component jobs in the area.

With a full-time program such as this in effect, the situation, difficult as it sometimes may become, will always be in hand by lending support to Air Force families.

Memorial Dedicated To 38th 'Rock' Regiment

A memorial cut from a French-quarried boulder and dedicated in honor of the 2d Infantry Division's 38th "Rock" Regiment was unveiled officially 22 July at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Nearly 5000 soldiers, high-ranking officers and dignitaries representing France, the Netherlands and neighboring Northwest communities attended the dedication ceremonies. The stone was unveiled by Col. B. F. Taylor, USA, regimental commander.

The stone originally came from a hill in France where the regiment made its historic stand against nine German divisions in 1918, thus earning its nickname, the "Rock of Marne" regiment.

The memorial took four months to build under the supervision of Donald Burr, a Tacoma, Wash., architect and former 38th Infantry officer. A bronze plaque has been affixed to the stone, which is sandblasted smooth and resembles the regimental crest in shape.

Scholarship Fund Honors Battery C.O.

A scholarship at Harvard College in memory of their former battery commander, William Gray, has been established by WW II members of Battery A, 247th Field Artillery.

The battery in which he served from 1941 to 1945 fought in the first Army action of WW II at Guadalcanal. At his death in 1952, he left a fourth of his estate to Malcolm C. Stewart, treasurer of The Gillette Company and a former member of Battery A, and requested Mr. Stewart to divide it among the 141 veterans of his unit.

However, many members expressed a desire that the money be used to create a lasting memorial to Gray. Therefore, a scholarship fund of approximately $10,000 was established at Harvard College, his alma mater.

The scholarship fund will be allowed to grow for 10 years or until one of the sons of Battery A qualifies for it. After that, either principal or interest may be used to assist worthy students.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

All-Metal 'Copter Rotor Blades Being Tested

Two experimental, all-metal helicopter rotor blades, produced by different companies, are being tested at the Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio.

Constructed basically of steel and aluminum, the blades are being studied as a possible replacement for combination wood, metal and fabric rotors used on the H-13 and H-23 Army and Air Force helicopters.

Produced by Bell Aircraft Helicopter Division and the Aircraft Division of Parsons Corporation, the blades are now being flight and whirl tested by the contractors and by WADC Propeller Laboratory.

If the metal blades prove feasible, they are expected to be more economical, stronger, lighter and more interchangeable than present rotors. Production and maintenance costs are expected to be lower, and replacement costs also should be greatly reduced.

FIRST F-100C

The Air Force's first North American F-100C Super Sabre has been delivered to TAC for service with the 450th Fighter Day Wing at Foster AFB, Texas.

Major changes from the F-100 Day Superiority Fighter are an in-flight refueling system, provisions to carry extra fuel drop tanks and bombs under its wings. The new model also has improved electronic methods of accurately delivering the bombs to a target.

Addition of the in-flight refueling system will permit the F-100C to escort high speed bombers on long range missions, or to be used as a fighter-bomber against distant targets, the Air Force said.

The plane is armed with four M-39 20mm cannon and is powered by a Pratt & Whitney J-57 turbojet engine with afterburner rated in the 10,000 pound class. The plane is 47 feet long, 15 feet high and has a 45 degree sweptwing with a span of 38 feet.

The F-100C was first flown in January 1955, by a company test pilot. The F-100A is the first operational airplane to fly at speeds faster than sound in level flight and holds the official world speed record of 755 miles per hour. TAC first got the F-100A in September 1954.

AFMA Pubinfo Chief

Frederick L. Harrison, who is assigned as a mobilization designee to the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Personnel, has been named Director of Public Relations for the Armed Forces Management Association.

During WW II, Mr. Harrison served with the Adjutant General's Department and the Transportation Corps, USA. He was recalled to active duty in 1952 with the rank of captain and assigned as an Industrial Engineer to the Office of the Chief of Transportation.

Col. Harpold To Utah GD

Col. Harley D. Harpold, USA, acting X Corps Transportation Officer at Ft. Riley, Kans., has been named depot inspector at Utah General Depot. He replaces Col. William E. Wilson, who has been appointed special assistant to the Commanding General, Brig. Gen. Herbert A. Hall, USA.

Colonel Harpold formerly held assignments as Depot Transportation Officer at the Quartermaster Motor Supply, Ft. Wayne, Mich., and Transportation member of the Army Service Forces Board, Washington, D. C. His daughter, Patricia, is married to Capt. William Lamdin, USA, who is returning to this country from an assignment in Austria, and his son, Lawrence, is a lieutenant in the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va.

Experimental Turboprop Fighter Plane Tested

The Republic XF-84H experimental turboprop fighter plane has been successfully flown at the U. S. Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards AFB, Calif.

The new plane was designed to test the feasibility of supersonic propellers of turboprop-type fighters for operational service. The experimental craft is said to be the fastest single-engine, propeller-driven plane ever built. It is expected to attain even greater speeds when fitted with an afterburner. The "H" is believed to be the first turboprop plane designed for afterburner augmentation of propeller power.

The power of the turbo engine is converted through a gear box and shafting into propeller power, providing high speed and performance without using as much fuel as jets. This economy of fuel permits extensive aerial endurance at altitude, enabling it to operate over enemy targets for reconnaissance. It is powered by an XT-40 turboprop engine built by the Allison Division of General Motors.

Because of its speed, long range and ability to carry heavy armament loads and still take off from short runways, the "H" meets requirements for a USAF low-level fighter-bomber or Navy carrier-based dive bomber.

A single-seat fighter, the XF-84H has wings swept back at a 40-degree angle with air intake ducts in the wing roots. A one-piece slab "flying tail" (stabilator) mounted at the top of the rudder provides greater maneuverability.

Navy Issues Order For Generating Set

Solar Aircraft Company of San Diego, Calif., received an order from the Navy Bureau of Ships to design, develop, test and deliver one packaged 300 kw, 60-cycle generating set, using the constant speed version of Solar's 500 hp Juniper gas turbine engine as a prime mover.

The unit is to be delivered to the Navy by December 1956. The contract specifies it must be able to function automatically, and must be operative in 10 seconds or less, after need arises.

The purpose of the Navy's order is to determine the practicality of gas turbine driven generator sets for both emergency shipboard use and ships service use. In smaller vessels the unit could be used as the main source of electrical power and on larger ones as an auxiliary or emergency set in case the main generator set malfunctions.

The prospective application of the packaged unit is as a logical sequel to the original use of the Jupiter engine by the Navy which has had it under evaluation as the prime mover for a special 400-cycle emergency generator set on an experimental destroyer, the USS Timmerman.

The Timmerman is a virtual floating laboratory for testing advanced ideas in naval design and operations. Most U. S. Navy ships use 60-cycle generating equipment.

Another important development contract has been received by Solar from the Air Force for the emergency starting of the Mars generator sets. This contract requires study of all feasible emergency starter methods. When the best method for this particular application is determined, it will be developed for industrial production.

All work on these orders will be done in Solar's San Diego plant.

instructional teams which tour the CONUS and overseas installations presenting instruction and rendering advice on subjects and problems pertinent to the mechanical and technical equipment field.

THE REQUIREMENTS FOR TRAINING publications and training media in the service is continual. Almost every major item of equipment or military subject requires a technical manual or field manual, and many are best taught by means of training films and Graphic Training Aids. The preparation of Department of the Army training media for which The Corps of Engineers is responsible is accomplished by the Department of Training Publications, Col. Edmund M. Fry, Department Director. Training Circulars, Technical Bulletins, Army Training Tests, Graphic Training Aids, Film Strips, Film Scenarios, T/O&Es, T/A's, and Manning Charts are some of the other items that go to make up the departmental responsibilities.

The great majority of personnel in the Corps of Engineers cannot attend resident instruction and must receive their training through extension study, reserve component schools or unit level schools and training programs. This requirement is the mission of the Department of Extension Instruction, Lt. Col. Kenneth H. Newton, Director. The Department is responsible for the preparation and administration of extension courses for individuals, distribution of engineer school training material as required, preparation and monitoring of certain civilian component training programs and the development of Corps of Engineer Subject Schedules which will be used to implement unit Army Training Programs. Training material and program support is furnished to over 100 USAR Schools, many colleges and universities with ROTC detachments and engineer units of all components. There are approximately 10,000 students presently enrolled in the extension course program.

THE COMBAT DEVELOPMENT GROUP, headed by Col. Ellis O. Davis, performs special studies relating to new developments, doctrine, tactics and techniques. It is the mission of this group to insure that the Corps of Engineers in its development of doctrine and techniques keeps, not abreast, but well ahead of technological and other progress.

At the present time, there are 28 separate courses for enlisted personnel and 12 different officer courses. Approximately 13,000 enlisted men and 3,000 officers and civilians were graduated in 1954. During the past year 243 allied students attended various officer and enlisted courses. The USAF and the USMC also send a considerable number of students each year to both officer and enlisted courses.

The academic departments combine their respective areas of responsibility to prepare and support the various courses which are offered in residence. A brief description of the major courses follows:

THE ENGINEER OFFICER ADVANCED COURSE is offered to provide advanced branch training to commissioned officers of the Regular Army or commissioned officers active in a reserve component. The course extends through 38 weeks of instruction. The class consists of approximately 120 officers.

The Associate Engineer Officer Advanced Course is an intensified version of the advanced course and is intended for commissioned officers active in a reserve component whose assignment, actual or anticipated, is to the Corps of Engineers. It also provides refresher training for Regular Army Officers assigned either to the Corps of Engineers or other branches of the service. The course covers a period of 15 weeks and its 5 annual classes graduate a total of 275 officers.

The Engineer Officer Basic Course provides basic branch training for newly commissioned 2d Lieutenants from all sources whose assignment, actual or anticipated, is to the Corps of Engineers. The course requires a period of 14 weeks, and from 24 classes annually graduates about 2,000 officers.

The Engineer Equipment Maintenance

Officer Course trains Engineer officers and warrant officers to inspect, maintain, and operate heavy construction equipment and motor vehicles used by Engineer units. The course consists of 440 hours of instruction, extends over a period of 10 weeks, and graduates about 250 students each year from the eleven courses presented each year.

THE AIRPORT ENGINEER COURSE is a 6 weeks course for commissioned officers who may be members of the Regular Army or of a reserve component in the active military service whose anticipated assignment is to duty as an airport engineer, construction engineer, or commander of an engineer construction battalion or an engineer aviation battalion. The number of classes offered each year varies from 6 to 18 with each class graduating about 45 officers.

The Post Engineer Course trains selected commissioned and warrant officers to supervise and administer the construction, operation, and maintenance of installation facilities; to furnish the essential services for which the Post Engineer is responsible; and to assemble and use the data required to manage efficiently repairs and utilities operations. The course covers a period of 4 weeks and includes 176 hours of instruction.

The enlisted courses of instruction at The Engineer School are conducted for the most part by the academic department of primary interest. Each department offers programs which are intended to qualify selected enlisted men in certain critical military occupational specialties. The Department of Topography, for example, offers enlisted specialist courses in cartographic drafting, construction drafting, and topographic surveying. The Department of Engineering likewise offers similar enlisted specialist courses in engineer construction, demolitions, and soils technology. During the year 1954, the academic departments graduated a total of 13,131 enlisted men, each qualified as a military specialist in some field vital to the field operations of the Corps of Engineers or other components of the Department of Defense.

The operations officer of the staff, Col. Myron E. Page, Jr., in addition to planning and programming new and revised courses, controls the Instructor Training Course or "charm school" conducted for all personnel assigned as instructors. The Assistant Commandant's educational advisor, Dr. Edward E. Pickard, keeps him abreast of the latest developments in teaching practices and techniques and appraises the effectiveness of the instruction being presented. The educational advisor conducts surveys, inspections, and performs various studies and research projects in order to measure the validity of the instruction and insure that the scopes and objectives of training are accomplished. The other members of the staff of the Assistant Commandant perform duties normally associated with their position titles.

CONTINUED ADVANCES in the application of atomic missiles to modern warfare imply modifications in the character and amount of essential engineer support. The traditional principles of sound engineer doctrine, developed and tested still remain valid and reliable; however, their relative importance may fluctuate as the weapons of modern strategy evolve. This continuing development of the tools of war requires perpetual re-examination, reassessment, and re-evaluation of their combined effects on current tactics and employment of troops and material. If The Engineer School has among its assigned functions a primary responsibility, it must be this: to associate the combat lessons of the past with the technological developments of the present to evolve a curriculum which will assure, in future emergencies, the same alert leadership which has always been typical of engineer field operations.

The curricula are intended to produce functional learning—that is, to require students to employ facts, skills, techniques, procedures, and principles in solving the practical problems which

Army Navy Air Force Journal 1447 30 July 1955

Reed Army Hospital, Washington; and Commanding Officer of Lovell General Hospital and Thayer General Hospital. General Pillsbury had made his home at Ross for the past two years.

He is survived by one brother, Boyden H. Pillsbury of Lowell, Mass.; one sister, Miss Mary B. Pillsbury of Dorset, Vt.; and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Pillsbury, also of Ross, widow of Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury.

Col. Albert Sidney Williams, USA-Ret.

Funeral services were held at St. Mary's Church, Philadelphia, Pa., on 25 July, for Col. Albert Sidney Williams, USA-Ret., who died at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, at the age of 79, after a long illness, on 22 July; with a later date for interment at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

Born in Mobile, Ala., to Probate Judge Price Williams and Margaret Marshall Williams, Colonel Williams attended schools in Mobile and later the University of Alabama. He read Law and was admitted to the Alabama Bar in 1897. The following year, he began his military career, serving as a sergeant with the 2d Alabama Infantry during the Spanish-American War. Promoted to the rank of captain of Volunteers, he later fought in the Philippine Insurrection, and subsequently was appointed a second lieutenant in the Regular Army, serving in the Cuban Army of Pacification. During WWI, Colonel Williams was Adjutant General and later, Chief of Staff of the Northeastern Department at Boston. A graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the Army War College, he returned to the latter as Director, for the period 1930-34.

Among his assignments were G-3 of the VI Corps Area at San Antonio, Tex., Executive Officer of the 7th Infantry Regiment at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., and twice he served as Commanding Officer of the 16th Infantry Regiment at Ft. Jay, N. Y. In 1937, Colonel Williams became Professor of Military Science and Tactics with the ROTC of the University of Pennsylvania, in which capacity he served until his retirement in 1940. Later, he was recalled to active duty at the University of Pennsylvania, on which he remained until 1943. In October of that year, he was named Emeritus Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University of Pennsylvania. Colonel Williams, after his retirement, became Personnel Relations Director with the Lanston Monotype Co., Philadelphia.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anne McKnight Williams of the Garden Court Apts., 47th & Pine Sts., Philadelphia; one son, Lt. Col. A. S. Williams, Jr., USA, also of Philadelphia; and one sister, Mrs. Edward Croft of New York City.

Mrs. Alice Christian Christmas

Private burial services for Mrs. Alice Christian Christmas, wife of Maj. Gen. John K. Christmas, USA-Ret., of 1816 45th St., Washington, D. C., were held in Arlington National Cemetery, on 21 July, with the Reverend D. M. Gillespie of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, officiating. Mrs. Christmas died at her home on 17 July, after a long illness.

Born at West Point, N. Y., Mrs. Christmas was a descendant of an Army family of four generations. Her father was Col. John B. Christian; her grandfather, Brig. Gen. Frederick W. Sibley; and her great-grandfather, Col. Caleb Sibley. Her husband, an Ordnance officer, who retired from active duty in 1954, with over 37 years' service, served in WWII on the design and production of Sherman tanks and other fighting vehicles. During the last ten years, General and Mrs. Christmas had made their home in Washington.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. William S. Brewster of Plymouth, Mass.; and one sister, Mrs. Frances S. Brand of Charlottesville, Va.

In lieu of flowers, the family requested that contributions be made to the American Cancer Society.

comprise the major part of each course. It is not the intention of The Engineer School to provide students with a textbook of answers, but rather to give them fundamental information in order that they are able to associate the critical elements of a problem with the relevant facts in order to arrive at a workable decision. The rapidity of technological change and its impact on the conduct of modern warfare make this approach imperative. Our strength must be counted in trained numbers.

Stated simply the purpose of The Engineer School is to train personnel for war.

BUSY COMMITTEE

The House Armed Services Committee has established a record for hearings during the first session of the 84th Congress which is almost as good as that set for both sessions of the 83d. The full Committee has held 76 hearings this year, compared with an average of 47 held during each session of the previous Congress.

Lt. Col. Sine to R&D Post

Lt. Col. Arnot C. Sine, MC, USA, has assumed his new post as Assistant Chief of the Research and Development Division. He replaces Col. Glenn J. Collins, MC, USA, who has been assigned to Europe.

Prior to this assignment Colonel Sine was an assistant inspector general to the Army Surgeon General.

Obituary

General Pillsbury, a graduate of Dartmouth College and of Harvard Medical School, entered the Army, following his graduation from the latter. During WWI, he served at Ft. Riley, Kans., where he married Miss Janet Wood. During the course of his active service, he was Chief of the Medical Services in the Panama Canal Zone; Director of the x-ray laboratories at Walter

Navy Extends Course At General Line School

The Navy has increased the length of the General Line School course three and one-half months.

The course, given at the U. S. Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif., now runs nine and one-half months. In stretching the course, VADM. James L. Holloway, Jr., USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, said that certain promotion examination exemptions, to be detailed at a later date, would be given to officers who successfully complete the curriculum.

The Admiral also established the policy that beginning with year group 1949 as many Line officers as possible will be ordered to the School. He said that student registration will start in September and January with each class graduating in June and October.

Officers eligible are those who have completed five to seven years' commissioned service. Admiral Holloway says that eligible officers need not submit applications for admittance to the School, since they automatically will be ordered to attend as vacancies occur.

TOP PREVENTIVE POST

Col. Robert L. Callison, MC, USA, has been appointed Chief of the Preventive Medicine Division in the office of the Surgeon General of the Army.

For the past two years he has headed the Environmental Control and Sanitation Branch of the Preventive Medicine Division.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Admiral Alfred C. Richmond

THE bill providing for involuntary retirement of Coast Guard officers has passed Congress and is at the White House for approval.

A second bill—passed by the Senate and sent to the House for consideration—would allow the resumption of the practice of granting compensatory leave to personnel who serve for long periods in lightships and at lighthouses and other isolated stations. If enacted into law, however, the bill would not provide for additional pay or allowances. Approximately 1,100 officers and men would be affected by the legislation.

A third bill—passed by the Senate and favorably reported by the House Committee—would authorize the officers with more than 40 years' service to receive retirement pay one grade above that rank actually held at the time of retirement.

The involuntary retirement bill will permit the Coast Guard to retire rear admirals and captains before they reach the statutory retirement age. In requesting the new authority, VADM. Alfred C. Richmond, Coast Guard Commandant, testified that the early retirement of high-ranking officers would be in the interest of morale and continued efficiency of the Service.

The average age at which the 15 admirals presently in service attained flag rank was 51 years; their average length of service is about 28 years, Admiral Richmond testified. If all these admirals were to stay in the service until the mandatory retirement age of 62, the 150 captains now on duty would have only a slight chance of promotion during the next 11 years. As a result, there would be a corresponding lag in advancements down through all commissioned ranks, he noted.

Here's the way the proposed bill would work:

Flag officers would be forced to retire on 30 June of the fiscal year in which they complete either seven years service as permanent rear admirals or a total of 35 years of active commissioned service. These retirements would be automatic, except in cases where the Commandant, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, retained an individual officer on active duty.

Captains could be retired after eight years of service in permanent grade and a total of 30 or more years active commissioned service. Annual boards, composed of five or more rear admirals, would review the records of all four-striper in that category, and select 75 per cent of the best fitted for retention. The remaining 25 per cent would be retired on 30 June of the year in which they reached the maximum service limitations. The Commandant would be able to retain for one year any captain whose continued service would be considered in the public interest.

Admiral Richmond expressed the opinion that, if the requested authority were granted, by 1963 there would be a constant ratio of about 30 captains with more than 30 years' service to about 120 with less than 30 years' service. The typical captain, he said, could expect advancement to flag rank at 52-53 years, in approximately his 30th year of service.

These earlier promotions would be reflected down through the lower ranks.
